Birthday Party On Friday, August 25

This week on Friday, August 25, 2006, I turned twelve. I really enjoyed my birthday this year. Rebekah made a beautiful cake and I got some lovely presents. They included a pretty pearl necklace from Caleb, caramel candies from Timothy, a straw hat from Rebekah, a dress from Matthew, and a writing case from Mom. I also got a bunch of paper dolls from Grandma, and a nice card from Stephen and Jenna. All in all, it was a fun day.

Rumor Has It...

It is being rumored that the we (the Aardsma family) are hoping to purchase an acre of land from a local farmer. The reason for this? We already have chickens, turkeys, cats, a dog, and pigs, but we wish to get a few more animals. Another acre would give us the space for sheep, a cow, and maybe a horse. As the idea of another acre is not entirely opposed, the option of expanding is being debated.

Sweet to the soul and healing to the bones.

A Word About The Weather

Things are cool and rainy today (Sunday, August 27). We got lots of rain yesterday, and things are beginning to look wet again. After almost three weeks of no rain, we all appreciate this nice break from sun and dry wind.

The Church In The Wildwood

A Sermon Summery

Last Sunday, August 20, Dad, the senior pastor of Faith Christian Fellowship, preached part one of his sermon intitled: Capitol Punishment: The Story of Paul Crump.

He told the story of Paul Crump, a black man who planned and carried out a robbery, murdering a person, and seriously injuring several others.

Paul Crump was sentenced to die, but after much hard work by several lawyers, he was pardoned and made a free man.

This week, we will find out what happens to Paul Crump after he gets out of jail, and Dad will share his views on capitol punishment.
